

The World in a Word

26 October 2026

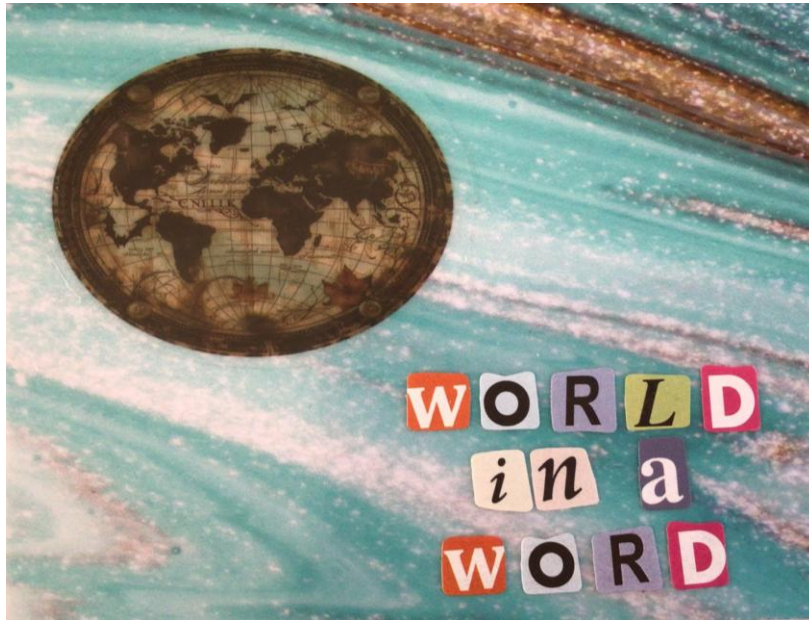

Words have always been more than words. They are windows into new worlds, carrying ideas, stories, knowledge and possibilities beyond what we already know.

Through books, there are places to explore without travelling, lives to understand beyond our own, and questions that open the door to further learning. Every page offers a possibility; every new word, a discovery.

The beauty of words lies not only in what they express, but in what they awaken curiosity, imagination, understanding, and the desire to keep learning.

Perhaps this is why the world has never felt limited to the places we can see. There is another world within the pages we read, the ideas we encounter, and the knowledge we continue to seek.

For some, the world is discovered through journeys across lands and oceans. For others, it also unfolds through a book, a sentence, an unfamiliar word, or a thought that changes the way they see things.

Words are my world. And that world has no end.
